SPDC Constitutional Referendum: Vote “Yes” or go to jail

Despite calls from the UN, pro-democracy forces, and the international community for a more inclusive and participatory constitution-drafting process, the SPDC refused to amend the proposed constitution. “It is impossible to draft the constitution again,” SPDC Information Minister Brig Gen Kyaw Hsan told UN Special Advisor on Burma Ibrahim Gambari on 7 March.¹ To date, the regime has not made public the text of the proposed constitution.

Meanwhile, SPDC authorities started registering citizens aged 18 and older in preparation for the May referendum. The SPDC issued temporary identity cards to allow nationals without identity cards to be included on the referendum voter rolls. Temporary identity cards were also distributed to Rohingya, ethnic ceasefire groups, and residents of ethnic areas. The regime carried out the registration process through SPDC local authorities, USDA members, military intelligence, police and immigration officials.

As the registration process started, it became clear that the regime intended to tightly control the referendum organization and force voters into approving the constitution.

- SPDC authorities threatened voters with heavy fines and prison terms voters if they failed to cast a “Yes” vote in the referendum. On 29 February, SPDC Special Branch police arrested three Rangoon residents for making comments about the referendum. The SPDC also ordered civil servants to vote “Yes.”
- SPDC local authorities appointed poll booth officers and instructed them to get “Yes” votes.
- In Townships across Burma the regime set up sub-commissions staffed mainly with local SPDC officials and USDA members.
- The regime rejected an offer of UN technical assistance and help with providing observers at the referendum.
- The SPDC charged about 20 detained pro-democracy activists, including 88 Generations Students Min Ko Naing and Ko Ko Gyi, under Law 5/96. The regime has used Law 5/96, which carries a penalty of up to 20 years’ jail, to imprison activists who criticize the constitution-drafting process.

“No” vote movement gains momentum

Defying regime threats and harassment, activists across Burma expressed their opposition to the referendum and campaigns for a “No” vote.

- 3 March: Buddhist monks in Mandalay launched a poster campaign urging a “No” vote at the referendum. Posters appeared in various locations in Amarapura Township, including several monasteries and Yadanapon University.
- Early March: University students and monks in Moulmein, Mon State, distributed leaflets opposing the referendum.

International reactions to the referendum

- 12 March: EU Special Envoy for Burma Piero Fassino expressed concern over the SPDC’s rejection of UN proposals and on behalf the EU urged the SPDC to release all political prisoners and allow them to take part in the referendum as a guarantee of a free and fair process.\(^{30}\)
- 14 March: US lawmakers introduced a Congressional resolution that denounced the SPDC’s draft constitution as one-sided, undemocratic, and illegitimate.\(^{31}\) The resolution urged US President George Bush to push the UNSC:
  - o to reject the SPDC’s constitution;
  - o to pass a binding resolution that will compel the regime to comply with UNSC calls for genuine political dialogue and the release of political prisoners; and
  - o to pass a comprehensive arms embargo against the junta.

INSIDE BURMA

Resistance days

- 21 March: In a dramatic protest against the SPDC, Thaw Zin Naing, a 26-year-old man, set himself ablaze in front of thousands of pilgrims at Rangoon's Shwedagon pagoda. “Down with the military regime,” he reportedly shouted before dousing his body with gasoline.\(^{32}\) The protester was taken to Rangoon General Hospital where he remains in critical condition and under tight surveillance.\(^{33}\)
- 27 March: NLD held a ceremony to mark the 63\(^{rd}\) anniversary of Resistance Day at its Rangoon headquarters. Over 500 people including NLD supporters, activists, politicians, and foreign diplomats attended the event. The NLD issued a statement urging the SPDC to convene the Parliament elected in 1990 and release all political prisoners.\(^{34}\) NLD held similar ceremonies in Mandalay and Magwe Divisions.\(^{35}\) The SPDC observes March 27 as “Armed Forces Day”.

Monks continue boycott

The regime increased its security presence at key monasteries in Rangoon. SPDC soldiers and riot police locked down and surrounded Kaba Aye monastery; four trucks and more than one hundred soldiers were seen in the vicinity.\(^{36}\) In spite of this, monks continued to boycott the regime:

- 18 March: All-Burmese Monks Alliance (ABMA) released a statement urging monks to boycott the religious exam.\(^{37}\) Monks in Rangoon, Magwe, Mandalay, Pegu, and Sagaing Divisions and Arakan State reported widespread monk participation in the boycott.\(^{38}\)

Pinheiro and HRC slam SPDC

On 14 March, UN Special Rapporteur on human rights in Burma Paulo Sergio Pinheiro slammed the SPDC for its patently false claims of democratization. “There is a contradiction between what the government of Myanmar says it is doing, and what is really happening,” Pinheiro said. “If you believe in gnomes, trolls, and elves, you can believe in this process of democracy in Myanmar,” he added. “No referendum or elections can be fair, no transition to democracy can be effective, without the release of political prisoners, the authorization for all political parties to operate, and the protection of the basic civil and political freedoms, all non-existent in Myanmar,” Pinheiro concluded. The SPDC denied Pinheiro a travel visa despite a UN Human Rights Council request for a follow-up visit.

On 13 March, in his last report presented to the Human Rights Council as UN Special Rapporteur on Burma, Pinheiro said that:

- The SPDC accelerated unlawful arrests. At least 70 individuals were arrested, with some 62 still detained since his last visit to Burma in November. Some 1,850 political prisoners remain detained in Burma’s prisons.
- Initial indications by the SPDC of a willingness to address human rights abuses had “disappeared.” There was no evidence that anyone responsible for the September’s killings or excessive use of force had been held accountable.
- Increasing militarization, extrajudicial killings, attacks on civilians, forced displacement continued to occur in Karen State.
- A culture of impunity thrived, with those perpetrating torture, forced labor, sexual violence, and the recruitment of child soldiers going unpunished.
- There have been marked signs of deterioration in the economic and social sectors, including the apparent lack of a primary level education for over half of Burma's children.
- SPDC local authorities continued to impose forced labor for public infrastructure and services.
- The announcement of a referendum was at odds with wide restrictions on free speech and the ongoing harassment of political opponents.

On 28 March, the Human Rights Council passed a resolution that strongly condemned the SPDC’s systematic human rights violations. The resolution said the regime failed to investigate and bring to justice those responsible for the violent repression of last year’s peaceful demonstrations. It also urged the junta to make the constitution-drafting process inclusive, participatory, and transparent.

The UN body also passed a separate resolution extending the mandate of the Special Rapporteur on human rights in Burma for another year and appointed Argentine Tomás Ojea Quintana as Pinheiro’s successor.

ILO: Forced Labor in Burma is still a problem

Against a backdrop of a 10 March ILO report that said forced labor in Burma continued to be a “serious problem”, more instances of forced labor surfaced.

- Since 3 March: SPDC Army Battalion No. 289 in Inn Township, Chin State, has used 80 villagers in Paletwa Township for forced labor in SPDC Army agricultural projects and animal farms.

- 26 March: It was reported that about 15 households in Toe Thet Ywar Thit Village of Kaw-Zar Sub Township, Mon State, had relocated to Hangan village in Ye Township because their livelihoods were at risk due to forced labor at an SPDC Army camp.

- Since 20 March: Local SPDC authorities and USDA officials in Mrauk-U Township, Arakan State, have ordered about 100 Rohingya villagers to perform forced labor to repair the Township’s drainage system.

- Since 21 March: Local SPDC authorities have forced about 50 villagers from Vasali model village located near Maungdaw in Arakan State to perform labor on a SPDC-owned rubber plantation.

Burma’s human rights record worsened: US report

On 11 March, the US State Department released its annual global report on human rights. According to the report, Burma remained among the world’s top 10 offenders and its “abysmal” human rights record worsened in 2007. The report said:

- The regime continued to commit extrajudicial killings and was responsible for disappearances, arbitrary and indefinite detentions, rape, and torture.

- The SPDC continued to use force to prohibit all public speech critical of the regime.

- Political prisoners were routinely confined and subjected to beatings and severe mistreatment by common criminals.

- Despite promises of dialogue, the SPDC did not honor its commitment to begin a genuine dialogue with pro-democracy forces and ethnic groups.

- Defying calls from the UN Security Council and ASEAN for the early release of all political prisoners, the regime continued to detain and imprison pro-democracy leaders.

Freedom of information

- The SPDC Censorship Board’s director Maj Tint Swe reportedly pressured the Myanmar Nation’s publisher to turn the weekly journal into a regime mouthpiece.

- The SPDC Censorship Board suspended publication of the weekly 7 Days News during 19-26 March for reporting on a multiple murder. On 3 March, unknown assailants fatally shot four family members and a housemaid at their residence in Kamayut Township.

- The SPDC Censorship Board prevented local media from reporting on the self-immolation of Thaw Zin Naing. [See above Resistance days]

- In early March, the Myanmar Info-Tech Corporation Ltd, the only provider for licensed Internet cafés in Burma, announced a plan to compile a list of all if its customers in Burma. SPDC authorities will use the list to facilitate monitoring of internet activity.

The SPDC Censorship board briefly banned the work of renowned veteran journalist Ludu Sein Win, who regularly writes for the Akhwint Alan Journal and the Weekly Eleven Journal. The ban was believed to come in response to Ludu Sein Win’s criticism of the military regime during an audio message recorded in early March. The SPDC police raided VCD rental shops across the country to seize copies of the film “Rambo 4.”

DISPLACEMENT

More boat people

People continued to flee oppression and discrimination in Burma in unseaworthy and over-crowded boats from Bangladesh.

- 29 February: Forty-five Rohingya left for Malaysia from Bangladesh’s Shapuri Dip aboard a fishing trawler.
- 2 March: Fifty Burmese boat people were rescued 280 km northeast of Sri Lanka after 22 days at sea after their wooden trawler stalled en route to Malaysia. Seventeen died before the rescue.
- 8 March: Two days after departing from a Teknaf jetty, 115 Rohingya and Bangladeshi people were missing after their boat sank.
- 22 March: Bangladesh Rifles (BDR) deported five Burmese, including two children that were caught attempting to cross the Naff River.
- 23 March: Teknaf police arrested seven Burmese in Teknaf who were planning to travel by boat to Malaysia.
- 24 March: Teknaf police arrested seven Burmese while others fled from the scene where they were preparing to depart by boat for Malaysia.
- 25 March: BDR arrested 13 Rohingya in Cox’s Bazaar. The group said that they were UNHCR recognized refugees living in camps along the border.
- 25 March: BDR detained 70 people from Burma caught crossing the border at Teknaf.

The arrival of boat people continues to place a burden on receiving countries. On 28 March, Thai PM said that Thailand’s navy was investigating resettling Rohingya in Thailand on a deserted island.

Malaysia

On 22 March, thugs from Malaysia’s infamous RELA rounded up more than 500 people from Burma. Two hundred Rohingya refugees, pregnant women, and about 50 children from a UNHCR program were among those arrested.

More displacement along the Thai border

On 4 March, SPDC Army’s Military Operations Commands 4 and 16 attacked eight villages in northern Papun District, Karen State. More than 2,000 villagers were forced to flee to the jungle. The attack was the largest against civilians in northern Karen State since the SPDC Army completed the re-supply of its camps and construction of roads at the end of 2007.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

SPDC spurns Gambari – again

On 6 March, UN Special Advisor on Burma Ibrahim Gambari arrived in Burma for a five-day official visit.\(^8^9\) During his visit, Gambari met with junta officials, including members of the SPDC-appointed constitutional referendum commission, and SPDC Information Minister Brig Gen Kyaw Hsan.\(^9^0\) As with his previous visit, Gambari was unable to secure a meeting with SPDC Chairman Sr Gen Than Shwe.\(^9^1\)

In his meeting with Gambari, Kyaw Hsan outright rejected UN requests for reopening the constitutional drafting process to make it more inclusive and to engage in more substantive political dialogue with Daw Aung San Suu Kyi.\(^9^2\) Kyaw Hsan accused Gambari of “bias” and “act[ing] outside [his] role as mediator” by releasing a statement from Daw Aung San Suu Kyi in November.\(^9^5\) [See November 2007 Burma Bulletin] Kyaw San also expressed unhappiness with Gambari's trips to other countries in the region and warned that his role as an “impartial adviser” would be brought into question if he continued to listen to suggestions from Western nations.\(^9^4\)

On 8 March, Gambari met with Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and other NLD executives.\(^9^5\) Gambari told the NLD leaders that they should grab any opportunities offered by the junta.\(^9^6\) On 10 March Gambari met with Daw Aung Suu Kyi for a second time before leaving Burma.\(^9^7\) On 18 March, he briefed the UN Security Council on his latest mission to Burma and offered a blunt assessment: "It is a source of disappointment that this latest visit did not yield any immediate tangible outcome."\(^9^8\)

Thai PM Samak and SPDC cozy up

On 14 March, Thai PM Samak Sundaravej made a good will visit to Burma, his first since taking office. Upon his return, Samak’s controversial defense of the Burmese generals on the grounds that they were “good Buddhists” because “they meditated” caused widespread dismay in Thai society and compelled ASEAN Sec-Gen Surin Pitsuwan to intervene.\(^9^9\)

With the focus of the visit squarely on economic aid and cooperation, Samak made clear Thailand’s intention to continue former Thai PM Thaksin’s business-first, good-neighbor policy with the SPDC. Samak met with SPDC officials, including SPDC Sr Gen Than Shwe.\(^1^0^0\)

- Samak and SPDC PM Thein Sein witnessed the signing of an investment accord aimed at protecting Thai investors in Burma and helping to boost foreign investment in Thailand.

On 15 March, Thai FM Noppadon Pattama confirmed that Thailand will push ahead with the Tasang Dam in Shan State.\textsuperscript{103}

On 20 March, Thai FM Noppadon Pattama expressed Thailand’s opposition to western financial sanctions during an official visit to the US. He spoke of engagement with the SPDC “as a friend,” and suggested that as ASEAN’s next chair Thailand could do more to push the SPDC to change.\textsuperscript{104}

ECONOMY

Economic failure continues in 2008

The SPDC has failed to address the pressures that brought about economic crises of 2007 and the economy was showing the strain in March.

- Businesses have been struggling to keep up with rising costs. Since 27 February, the SPDC has cracked down on illegal trading of black-market fuel which has reportedly led to a 13% increase in black market prices. A gallon of gasoline has gone from 4,400 kyat (US$4) to 5,000 kyat ($4.50), and a gallon of diesel from 4,600 kyat ($4.20) to 5,200 kyat ($4.70).\textsuperscript{105}
- Prices have also increased for foreign trading companies who must now pay the semi-official rate of $4.00 a gallon for diesel, up from $3.52 on 27 February. This rate is only available to businesses which hold foreign currency accounts at the Myanmar Foreign Trading Bank.\textsuperscript{106}
- In an effort to appease people and businesses named on the US sanctions lists, the SPDC approved the opening of Singapore dollar currency accounts at the Myanmar Foreign Trade Bank and Myanma Investment and Commercial Bank.\textsuperscript{107}
- Burma analyst Sean Turnell predicted that the SPDC would be more financially pressed in 2008 due to the lack of tourists, slowing tax revenues, postponed foreign investments, global liquidity and credit problems.\textsuperscript{108} SPDC-controlled media reported that tourism almost halved in the three months following the Saffron Revolution.\textsuperscript{109}
- The Brookings Institute’s annual “Failed State” index ranked Burma as the 17th weakest state in the world, one of five countries outside of sub-Saharan Africa with the label of “critically weak”. Burma received the second-poorest overall “political” score, trailing only Somalia. It received the lowest possible scores for “voice and accountability” and “freedom” while coming in third worst for “corruption.”\textsuperscript{110}

Gems auction

From 9 to 20 March, the Myanmar Gems Enterprise held their second gem auction of 2008.\textsuperscript{111} The SPDC hoped to sell more than 7,700 lots of precious stones with an approximate value of US$153 million.\textsuperscript{112} It is unclear how successful the event was in bringing the SPDC much-needed revenue. On the opening day only 47 lots were sold. In contrast to the 3,000 anticipated participants, only 281 foreign buyers reportedly attended.

SPDC increases hardship for struggling farmers

Rather than providing assistance to struggling farmers, the SPDC has placed bans on bean export licenses until May 2008. The sale price has subsequently fallen from 5,000 kyat to between 3,500 and 4,000 kyat per kilo. The low bean prices coupled with a poor harvest have hit farmers hard in Tharawaddy Township, Pegu Division. Farms that previously produced 120 kilos per acre in 2008 have only harvested 20 to 25 kilos due to unseasonable rains.

Thailand wheels and deals with the junta

While Thailand and the SPDC signed trade and investment deals with the junta, Thai corporations continued to benefit from the “good neighborly relations.” [See above Thai PM Samak and SPDC cozy up]

- Thai satellite operator ShinSat signed two five-year contracts worth US$5 million with Myanmar Posts and Telecommunications (MPT) for satellite broadband capacity.
- Thailand’s Loxley Plc plans to launch the first convenience store in Burma in partnership with junta crony Dagon Win Aung.
